Trying to Efface His Place in Public Eye

QUIETLY GOES ABOUT HIS BUSINESS IN LITTLE NORTHAMPTON LAW OFFICE

(Copyright 1931 by United Press)

Northampton, Mass., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Calvin Coolidge apparently is the only man left in America who refuses to volunteer advice for curing the depression.

He is devoting himself energetically to minding his own business in his characteristic silent way.

Calvin Coolidge

If there were a shortage of advice, Coolidge undoubtedly would do his bit. But as with other commodities, the market on advice is gorged.

So this man who guided the nation through its richest years is content to let those who have responsibility exercise it while he sits quietly in his country town law office here, philosophical and confident that the common sense of the average hard-headed man will make the best of what there is and eventually restore things to rights.

Citizen Coolidge is one national figure making a determined effort to efface himself. Most public men, after retiring from office, insist upon resuming their amateur standing which includes the pererogative of telling the world often and long that ought to be done. Coolidge learned in the White House that it sometimes causes trouble when a man, no longer in a place of responsibilty, cut off from intimate facts, undertakes as a volunteer, to run the country. And, he has gone back to his normal life as a private citizen to make a heroic effort to mind his own business.

That is not easy for an ex-president, especially one who voluntarily retired at the height of his popularity. He is asked almost daily to attend a large dinner. But if he goes, he is pressed to speak. If he wants to travel, ordinary courtesy would compel him to accept hospitality which would involve speeches in which he might say something that would embarrass others.

He never has been abroad and probably won't be able to go now. Such a trip would involve honors from foreign governments which it would be ungracious not to accept. When he was president he had his troubles with amateur diplomats and he would not have relished the experience of an ex-president poking around Europe giving advice to the world about its affairs.

Once he thought of becoming a business executive. But he looked into many offers he received and found usually they were from businesses which had some relation to the federal government or had competitors who would suffer from the mere fact of his connection with a rival company.

So at 9 a. m. daily he goes to his small law office up one iflght in the old Masonic building here in Northampton which still retains the small town flavor.

The law office sign "Coolidge and Hemenway" has been partly eroded by years of window washing. The sign on the door says "walk in." You walk into Coolidge's office through a small ante-room.

While we were talking a woman client entered into the room asking, how do you get out of this place?"

Coolidge told her to try the other door.

There is a small faded picture of Lincoln on the wall in his office. A yellowed facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, and a case of old law books.

Coolidge had just received sad news. Edward J. Blanchard, his neighbor in Plymouth, and boyhood playmate, had died. He decided at once to attend the funeral.

There appear to be no more gray hairs than when he was president.

Urges Co-operation For Benefit Show

Every working individual in Brainerd should feel it his or her duty to purchase two or more tickets to the benefit performance here Thursday, November 19 for the cause of charity, Harry Greenberg, manager of the Paramount theatre and in charge of ticket sales said today.

The theatre benefit here is in line with a national move by theatrical concerns to aid the unemployed and their families in their local communities.

All organizations who have as yet not received their tickets for sale will please get in touch with Greenberg at the earliest moment.

GOVERNMENT HEAD SAYS JAPANESE HAVE COMPLETE CONTROL

INDICATIONS POINT TO COMPLETE NEUTRALITY OF RUSSIA IN FAR EAST ROW

(By United Press)

Sporadic fighting was resumed in the Nonni river sector today as Japanese delivered an ultimatum demanding withdrawal of Chinese troops opposing them in the Tsitsihar area of Manchuria by Nov. 25.

Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commander, informed the United Press he intended to open the railroad line to Tsitsihar and keep it open. He admitted that "a regional state of war" exists. He charged that the Chinese were receiving aid from soldiers in the Soviet army. Moscow denied it.

The Japanese position of advance toward Anganchi and Tsitsihar appared to be far stronger than the Chinese position and it was believed certain pro-Japanese forces would force the fall of Tsitsihar.

General Ma Chan-Shan declared he would not surrender Tsitsihar as demanded by Japanese.

Yuan Chin-Kai, head of the new Mukden government, charged Japan forced him to declare independence from China, has controlled his policies and is attempting to restore the Manchu dynasty.

Harbin, Manchuria, Nov. 14.—Soviet Russia is maintaining a strict and complete appearance of neutrality in the Chinese-Japanese conflict despite her vast interests in Manchuria.

On a five-day journey across Siberia to the Manchurian frontier and thence to the Aanganchi war zone, the United Press correspondent was unable to discover a single indication of military preparation on the part of the communist state.

Every sign disclosed by continuous inquiries and investigation, particularly in the frontier region, indicated the falsity of reports of concentration of red army troops on the border.

Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—(Uncensored)—Yuan Chin-Kai, head of the newly-established government of Manchuria, charged today that Japan was dictating the policies of his regime and "forcing me to do many things contrary to my wishes."

The Japanese have complete control of the new regime, Yuan Chin-Kai said in an interview in his dingy office.

"The Japanese would have imprisoned me and installed evil-minded persons who would not have guarded Manchuria's welfare if I had refused," he said. "I a trying to do my best, but I would like to have Chang Hsueh-Liang (nominal ruler of Manchuria) return. However, that is impossible now.

"The Japanese have tried vigorously to restore the Manchu emperor (Henry Py-Yi), but I will have nothing to do with it. The Japanese have pressed me to negotiate for a settlement in Manchuria, but I have refused and will still refuse."

Washington, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—The war department today ordered Col. Reynolds J. Burt of the militia bureau to assume command of the 15th infantry at Tientsin, China, replacing Col. J. D. Taylor, whose three-year assignment has expired. The infantry is charged with protecting American life and property and keeping communications open between Tientsin and Peking.

REJECT WINKLER'S OFFER TO RETURN BONDS FOR FREEDOM

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Rejecting the offer of Gus Winkler to return $600,000 worth of bonds from the Lincoln National Bank robbery in return for his fredom, Max Towle, county prosecutor, was enroute east today to confer with authorities in Chicago and Buffalo, N. Y.

Towle declared before his departure he would prosecute Winkler unless he proves an ironclad alibi.

"Under any circumstances a trade for Winkler's freedom will not be considered and and compromise will not be countenanced," Towle said.

Winkler offered to secure return of $600,000 worth of bonds taken in the $2,500,000 bank robbery if authorities would drop charges of complicity in the holdup on which he is awaiting trial.

Meeker Commissioners Refuse to Cut Budget

Litchfield, Minn., Nov. 14. — (U.P.) — Meeker county commissioners have refused to make further cuts in their 1932 budget despite the appeals of 400 taxpayers, they announced today.

The commissioners pointed out that already they had cut $10,000 from next year's expenditures and that most of the remaining funds had been tied up by contracts signed for next year.

Approximately $2,000,000 already had been cut from the budgets of Minnesota's 86 other counties, it was estimated.

3 WOMEN CLAIMING TO BE MAN'S WIDOWS FIGHT FOR MILLIONS

12-MILLION DOLLAR ESTATE OF W. H. OCHSNER FIGURES IN COURT BATTLE

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Three women who claim to be widows of the same man prepared today for a momentous court battle over the posthumous fortune of Washington H. Ochsner, penniless Swiss geologist who became a multi-millionaire after his death.

A Nevada decision of Judge Emmet J. Walsh ended a preliminary skirmish for the $12,000,000 estate. He refused to set aside a previous order which voided a divorce obtained by Ochsner from his first wife, Mrs. Frances Ochsner, in 1909.

The order had the effect of holding Mrs. Frances Ochsner to be the only legal widow and gave her the first victory in the many sided case. Mrs. Nancy Ochsner Baley of Carson City, Nev., Ochsner's second wife, who was divorced from him in 1925, and Mrs. Hilda Carling Ochsner, the third wife who was married to him when she died in 1927, both opposed the Tonopah order.

Judge Walsh held that Mrs. Frances Ochsner never had been legally served with papers in the 1909 case and therefore the subsequent divorce decree was void, making her still the geologist's wife and further voiding his two later marriages.

Ochsner died four years ago leaving an estate composed almost entirely of the supposedly "worthless" land. He was one of the original prospectors in the Kettleman Hills region, however, and always held that a large oil reservoir existed there. His prophecy was not borne out until after he died.

Lindbergh to Blaze Air Trail to Central America

DREISER MEETS THE JUDGE

Theodore Dreiser, American author who visited the mine regions of Kentucky to probe conditions there, is shown above, right, as he met Circuit Judge D. C. Jones of Harlan, who recommended that the grand jury investigate stories of "misconduct" by Dreiser at Pineville. The grand jury returned an indictment in the case. Dreiser accused Judge Jones of favoring the mine owners in decisions made by him during the present trouble in Kentucky.

OLSON SETS PRECEDENT IN DEFENDING HIS ADMINISTATIVE POLICY IN COURT

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—For the first time in the history of the United States, a governor appeared in court today as an attorney to defend one of his administrative policies.

Governor Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota's first farmer-labor chief executive argued before District Court Judge Gustavus Loevinger in favor of his 45 cent an hour minimum wage for highway workers.

The suit was brought against State Commissioner of Highways C. M. Babcock by two contracting companies to test the validity of the governor's demand that minimum wage and hour specifications be included in highway contracts.

The companies bringing the action were the Erickson Johnson Co., of Minneapolis and the R. B. Fraser Co., of Faribault.

The highway commissioner has the right to make whatever restrictions in warding contracts that he would have if having hte work done by labor, Olson said.

"He could insert a six hour day, or a four hour day, if he saw fit," Olson said. "The commissioner may even refused to let the contract to the lowest bidder if he thinks the work could be done better by another bidder."

"The legislature in enacting the statute under the trunk highway amendment said in substance, 'go ahead and build the trunk highways in such a manner as your best judgement dictates,'" Olson said.

"Not even a taxpayer can interfere or ask judicial interference until and unless the commissioner is guilty of waste of funds or has acted contrary to public policy."

DEFINITE MOVE FOR U. S.-CANADA PACT ON WATERWAY MADE

RESULT OF HOUR'S CONFERENCE BETWEEN HERRIDGE AND STIMSON

Washington, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Definite progress toward a United States-Canadian agreement on development of the St. Lawrence river was made today at an hour-long conference between Secretary of State Stimson and Canadian Minister W. B. Herridge, the United Press was informed by an authoritative source. The exact nature of the Canadian proposal was kept in confidence. A communique on the subject will be issued tomorrow.

Herridge, who has just returned from Ottawa, talked with Stimson for nearly an hour. With the two statesmen were John D. Hickerson, state department expert on the St. Lawrence project, Hanford MacNider, U. S. minister to Canada, Assistant Secretary of State Rogers and Hume Wrong, secretary of the Canadian legation here.

Stimson and Herridge said they would issue a joint communique tomorrow.

U. S. Taxpayers Would Shoulder War Debts Cheerfully if it Would Relieve World Ills, Gov. Ritchie Believes

New York, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, believes the best way to hasten the end of the depression is for the world to keep its feet on the ground, he said in a speech before the Academy of Political Science last night. He urged banishing feras, recovery of morale, less talk and more action.

"Our own democracy has made a superb showing in this crisis, the governor said. He pointed to the situation abroad to emphasize this. Citing socialism, communism, hitlerism, "dictatorships of the unfit," the rule of autocracy, plutocracy, "black shirts," "red shirts" and what not.

"Democracy," declared Ritchie, "is beter fitted to meet this law of life than any social-political or economic device the world has so far been bale to discover or evolve."

Referring to war debts, Ritchie said, if carried to the point of cancellation he believed the American taxpayer would shoulder the burden cheerfully if assuming them would cure the ills of the world and at the same time promote his own ultimate welfare.

The governor said he believed "the greatest insurance against war is a virile democracy, capable and empowered to assert its democratic will."

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, also a speaker before the academy, made answer to some of the criticisms of his plan for mitigation of industrial depressions. He emphasized the "voluntary action" element in his plan, as opposed to compulsion and reaffirmed his belief that stablization of industry, particularly employment, is possible by this procedure.

ALBERT B. RITCHIE

Stablization of employment, meaning assurance of employment with insurance if necessary, is the most important feature of Swope's plan.

Modification of the Sherman anti-trust law along his line recommended by the American Bar Association is one method of suggested by Swope for encouraging companies to join trade associations.

To those critics who expressed the belief that his plan would mean putting the government in business, Swope answered by pointing out that he advocated "that the initiative be taken by trade associations and not by the government."

FIVE SWEPT FROM RAFT TO DEATH AS BADEN BADEN SINKS

CAPTAIN OF ILL-FATED SHIP TELLS HOW OWNERS AND 3 OTHERS DROWNED

Colon, Panama, Nov. 14.—(U.P.) — A huge wave that crashed over a life raft from the Diesel schooner Baden Baden caused the loss of five men, including the two owners, its captain said today in describing his experiences.

Capt. Hewitt Walters, suffering from severe injuries, told the United Press that everyone on the Baden Baden left the ship when it became apparent it was sinking, but that heavy seas swept five men off the life-raft.

The drowned included Adolfo Shoeneck and Hans Lau, the owners. The other 11 sailors were rescued by the United States naval mine-sweeper Swan which landed them here last night.

"We had been suffering greatest agony and I had decided I was unable to hold out any longer," Captain Walters said in describing the rescue. "I had been propped up on the life boat's thwart, supported by an oar, for almost three days."

Plan Merger of Leading Newsprint Companies

Montreal, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Leading Canadian newsprint producers have been conferring on a sonsolidation plan with the backing of Bankers Associated with the industry, it was learned today.

International Paper, Abitibi Power & Paper, Consolidated Paper Corp., St. Lawrence Paper Corp., Price Brothers and the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co., played a prominent role in the negotiations, it was learned.

While similar attempts to consolidate the leading newsprint mils of the dominion have failed in the past, the present negotiations it was understood, have reached a stage where successful conclusion is a district possibility.

'BLUEBEARD' ENTERS NOT GUILTY PLEA AT ARRAIGNMENT

OFFICERS GUARD HARRY F. POWERS TO PREVENT MOB VIOLENCE

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Harry F. Powers, alleged confessed "Bluebeard" killer of two women and three children, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned formally on five charges of first degree murder.

Judge John C. Southern tentatively set the trial date for December 7 and said he would set date for arguments on a motion for change of venue later.

Fifty officers guarded Powers as he was taken from the Harrison county jail to the federal building to enter formal pleas to the indictments which were returned last Saturday.

Heavily handcuffed, and wearing the same light gray suit he wore when arrested last August, the once dapper matrimonial agent was escorted from the jail to an automobile between a double line of guards. He was nervous and obviously afraid of a recurrence of mob threats.

As Judge Southern read each indictment Powers responded promptly, "I am not guilty." The five true bills charged him with killing Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, Park Ridge, Ill., her three children, and Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Worcester, Mass.

TRY ALKY BARONS ALLEGED MEMBERS CAPONE GANG NOV 30

56 CHARGED WITH LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS IN $6,000,000 CONSPIRACY

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—The $6,000,000 midwest alcohol conspiracy case in which 56 defendants are charged with violating the prohibition laws with Al Capone as their sponser will be tried Nov. 30.

The alleged ring which includes 9 women and a former state's attorney sought through their 17 attorneys to postpone trial until next year, but Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley ordered immediate prosecution of the case.

Indictment of the alleged conspirators came last June as part of the government's campagin to end midwest racketeering through use of income tax and dry law charges.

The government contends the ring operated through headquarters in Chicago with its principal branches at Waterloo and Clinton, Ia. Shipments of alcohol in carload lots were made to Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota anl South Dakota points.

Profits of the syndicate were estimated by the government to be in excess of $6,000,000 a year, with Capone receiving a weekly "cut."

TO ASK CONGRESS FOR $1,800,000,000 TO AID HOME OWNERS

WOULD PERMIT BANKS HOLDING MORTGAGES TO REDISCOUNT THEM TO NEW BANKS

Washington, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—President Hoover will ask congress next month to approve a $1,800,000,000 move financing program designed to revitalize the home building industry and to keep "old man foreclosure" from the American doorstep.

NO..T

Create Discount Banks

The president's aggressive program, provides for establishment of a new national system of home-loan discount banks.

The project would make available some $1,800,000,000 to aid thousands of persons to build and keep their own homes.

The discount banks, one for each federal reserve district, would have broadly the three-fold purpose of relieving pressure on home owners and the banks holding their mortgages; the semi-paralysis that has gripped the home building industry; and establishing a permanent mortgage rediscount system of such strength as to combat in future years the deadening effect of business depressions.

The president emphasized that the scheme, essentiallly, is to aid the small home owner. For example, the plan stipulates that the banks are to rediscount mortgage loans on homes, but that no such mortgage is eligible for rediscount if it exceeds $15,000.

The president's idea also is to stimulate a building boom to aid unemployment. It was indicated home building had fallen off nearly 80 per cent in recent months.

The idea behind the scheme, as the president's statement explained it, is to permit banks holding mortgages on homes to rediscount those mortgages with the new banks. Local banks can pass on this relief from pressure of credits falling due to the home owner or builder.

Many banks onw hold mortgages on homes that are past due and owners cannot meet them. Banks and building and loan associations do not want to foreclose. They would then find themselves owning an increasingly great number of houses and land from which they deprived no income but on which they had to pay taxes and upkeep.

The 12 new home loan discount banks, or fewer if that number is not necessary, would have an original combined capital of $150,000,000 under the Hoover plan. This would make it possible for them to rediscount mortgages up to $1,800,000,000.

The money would be raised locally in designated sections. If a section failed to subscribe the capital needed for the local new bank, the government would make up the total. But a scheme has been included to turn over the government's stock to private ownership as rapidly as possible.

Each bank is to have an initial capital of from $5,000,000 to $30,000,000, depending on the need in its district.

GOPHERS' SECONDS ROMP OVER CORNELL IN FIRST HALF 34 TO 0

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—using the reserves, Minnesota football team made their final home game of the regular season today against the Cornell team from Mount Vernon, Iowa.

First Quarter

Minensota marched down the field with four first downs and within a few minutes, Griffin plunged one yard for a touchdown. The try for point failed. Score Minnesota 6, Cornell 0. After several passes and first down, Champlin went over for the second touchdown. A pass, Champlin to Krezowski made the score Minnesota 13, Cornell 0. Schwartz ran 30 yards for the third touchdown when he caught a pass from Champlin. The extra point point was good. The quarter ended with the score, Minnesota 20, Cornell 0.

Second Quarter

Except for Stein, a complete new Minnesota team went in at the beginning of the second quarter. Manders broke away for a touchdown. Walter Hass kicked goal, making the score, Minnesota 27, Cornell 0. After a long pass in which he figured, Sommers plunged 5 yards for a touchdown. Haas failed to kick. Score, Minnesota 33, Cornell 0. Several Minnesota regulars were replaced. Score for quarter, Minnesota 20, Cornell 0, making the score at half, Minnesota 34, Cornell 0.

Ochsner died four years ago leaving an estate composed almost entirely of the supposedly "worthless" land. He was one of the original prospectors in the Kettleman Hills region, however, and always held that a large oil reservoir existed there. His prophecy was not borne out until after he died.

At Miami he will pilot the American Clipper,, New Pan-American Airway plane, on the inaugural trip to Central America.

U. S. Taxpayers Would Shoulder War Debts Cheerfully if it Would Relieve World Ills, Gov. Ritchie Believes

New York, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, believes the best way to hasten the end of the depression is for the world to keep its feet on the ground, he said in a speech before the Academy of Political Science last night. He urged banishing feras, recovery of morale, less talk and more action.

"Our own democracy has made a superb showing in this crisis, the governor said. He pointed to the situation abroad to emphasize this. Citing socialism, communism, hitlerism, "dictatorships of the unfit," the rule of autocracy, plutocracy, "black shirts," "red shirts" and what not.

"Democracy," declared Ritchie, "is beter fitted to meet this law of life than any social-political or economic device the world has so far been bale to discover or evolve."

Referring to war debts, Ritchie said, if carried to the point of cancellation he believed the American taxpayer would shoulder the burden cheerfully if assuming them would cure the ills of the world and at the same time promote his own ultimate welfare.

The governor said he believed "the greatest insurance against war is a virile democracy, capable and empowered to assert its democratic will."

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, also a speaker before the academy, made answer to some of the criticisms of his plan for mitigation of industrial depressions. He emphasized the "voluntary action" element in his plan, as opposed to compulsion and reaffirmed his belief that stablization of industry, particularly employment, is possible by this procedure.

ALBERT B. RITCHIE

Stablization of employment, meaning assurance of employment with insurance if necessary, is the most important feature of Swope's plan.

Modification of the Sherman anti-trust law along his line recommended by the American Bar Association is one method of suggested by Swope for encouraging companies to join trade associations.

To those critics who expressed the belief that his plan would mean putting the government in business, Swope answered by pointing out that he advocated "that the initiative be taken by trade associations and not by the government."

DREISER MEETS THE JUDGE

Theodore Dreiser, American author who visited the mine regions of Kentucky to probe conditions there, is shown above, right, as he met Circuit Judge D. C. Jones of Harlan, who recommended that the grand jury investigate stories of "misconduct" by Dreiser at Pineville. The grand jury returned an indictment in the case. Dreiser accused Judge Jones of favoring the mine owners in decisions made by him during the present trouble in Kentucky.

OLSON SETS PRECEDENT IN DEFENDING HIS ADMINISTATIVE POLICY IN COURT

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—For the first time in the history of the United States, a governor appeared in court today as an attorney to defend one of his administrative policies.

Governor Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota's first farmer-labor chief executive argued before District Court Judge Gustavus Loevinger in favor of his 45 cent an hour minimum wage for highway workers.

The suit was brought against State Commissioner of Highways C. M. Babcock by two contracting companies to test the validity of the governor's demand that minimum wage and hour specifications be included in highway contracts.

The companies bringing the action were the Erickson Johnson Co., of Minneapolis and the R. B. Fraser Co., of Faribault.

The highway commissioner has the right to make whatever restrictions in warding contracts that he would have if having hte work done by labor, Olson said.

"He could insert a six hour day, or a four hour day, if he saw fit," Olson said. "The commissioner may even refused to let the contract to the lowest bidder if he thinks the work could be done better by another bidder."

"The legislature in enacting the statute under the trunk highway amendment said in substance, 'go ahead and build the trunk highways in such a manner as your best judgement dictates,'" Olson said.

"Not even a taxpayer can interfere or ask judicial interference until and unless the commissioner is guilty of waste of funds or has acted contrary to public policy."

DEFINITE MOVE FOR U. S.-CANADA PACT ON WATERWAY MADE

RESULT OF HOUR'S CONFERENCE BETWEEN HERRIDGE AND STIMSON

Washington, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Definite progress toward a United States-Canadian agreement on development of the St. Lawrence river was made today at an hour-long conference between Secretary of State Stimson and Canadian Minister W. B. Herridge, the United Press was informed by an authoritative source. The exact nature of the Canadian proposal was kept in confidence. A communique on the subject will be issued tomorrow.

Herridge, who has just returned from Ottawa, talked with Stimson for nearly an hour. With the two statesmen were John D. Hickerson, state department expert on the St. Lawrence project, Hanford MacNider, U. S. minister to Canada, Assistant Secretary of State Rogers and Hume Wrong, secretary of the Canadian legation here.

Stimson and Herridge said they would issue a joint communique tomorrow.

FIVE SWEPT FROM RAFT TO DEATH AS BADEN BADEN SINKS

CAPTAIN OF ILL-FATED SHIP TELLS HOW OWNERS AND 3 OTHERS DROWNED

Colon, Panama, Nov. 14.—(U.P.) — A huge wave that crashed over a life raft from the Diesel schooner Baden Baden caused the loss of five men, including the two owners, its captain said today in describing his experiences.

Capt. Hewitt Walters, suffering from severe injuries, told the United Press that everyone on the Baden Baden left the ship when it became apparent it was sinking, but that heavy seas swept five men off the life-raft.

The drowned included Adolfo Shoeneck and Hans Lau, the owners. The other 11 sailors were rescued by the United States naval mine-sweeper Swan which landed them here last night.

"We had been suffering greatest agony and I had decided I was unable to hold out any longer," Captain Walters said in describing the rescue. "I had been propped up on the life boat's thwart, supported by an oar, for almost three days."

Plan Merger of Leading Newsprint Companies

Montreal, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Leading Canadian newsprint producers have been conferring on a sonsolidation plan with the backing of Bankers Associated with the industry, it was learned today.

International Paper, Abitibi Power & Paper, Consolidated Paper Corp., St. Lawrence Paper Corp., Price Brothers and the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co., played a prominent role in the negotiations, it was learned.

While similar attempts to consolidate the leading newsprint mils of the dominion have failed in the past, the present negotiations it was understood, have reached a stage where successful conclusion is a district possibility.

'BLUEBEARD' ENTERS NOT GUILTY PLEA AT ARRAIGNMENT

OFFICERS GUARD HARRY F. POWERS TO PREVENT MOB VIOLENCE

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Harry F. Powers, alleged confessed "Bluebeard" killer of two women and three children, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned formally on five charges of first degree murder.

Judge John C. Southern tentatively set the trial date for December 7 and said he would set date for arguments on a motion for change of venue later.

Fifty officers guarded Powers as he was taken from the Harrison county jail to the federal building to enter formal pleas to the indictments which were returned last Saturday.

Heavily handcuffed, and wearing the same light gray suit he wore when arrested last August, the once dapper matrimonial agent was escorted from the jail to an automobile between a double line of guards. He was nervous and obviously afraid of a recurrence of mob threats.

As Judge Southern read each indictment Powers responded promptly, "I am not guilty." The five true bills charged him with killing Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, Park Ridge, Ill., her three children, and Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Worcester, Mass.

TRY ALKY BARONS ALLEGED MEMBERS CAPONE GANG NOV 30

56 CHARGED WITH LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS IN $6,000,000 CONSPIRACY

Chicago, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—The $6,000,000 midwest alcohol conspiracy case in which 56 defendants are charged with violating the prohibition laws with Al Capone as their sponser will be tried Nov. 30.

The alleged ring which includes a woman and a former state's attorney sought through their 17 attorneys to postpone trial until next year, but Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley ordered immediate prosecution of the case.

Indictment of the alleged conspirators came last June as part of the government's campagin to end midwest racketeering through use of income tax and dry law charges.

The government contends the ring operated through headquarters in Chicago with its principal branches at Waterloo and Clinton, Ia. Shipments of alcohol in carload lots were made to Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota anl South Dakota points.

Profits of the syndicate were estimated by the government to be in excess of $6,000,000 a year, with Capone receiving a weekly "cut."

TO ASK CONGRESS FOR $1,800,000,000 TO AID HOME OWNERS

WOULD PERMIT BANKS HOLDING MORTGAGES TO REDISCOUNT THEM TO NEW BANKS

Washington, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—President Hoover will ask congress next month to approve a $1,800,000,000 move financing program designed to revitalize the home building industry and to keep "old man foreclosure" from the American doorstep.

NO..T

Create Discount Banks

The president's aggressive program, provides for establishment of a new national system of home-loan discount banks.

The project would make available some $1,800,000,000 to aid thousands of persons to build and keep their own homes.

The discount banks, one for each federal reserve district, would have broadly the three-fold purpose of relieving pressure on home owners and the banks holding their mortgages; the semi-paralysis that has gripped the home building industry; and establishing a permanent mortgage rediscount system of such strength as to combat in future years the deadening effect of business depressions.

The president emphasized that the scheme, essentiallly, is to aid the small home owner. For example, the plan stipulates that the banks are to rediscount mortgage loans on homes, but that no such mortgage is eligible for rediscount if it exceeds $15,000.

The president's idea also is to stimulate a building boom to aid unemployment. It was indicated home building had fallen off nearly 80 per cent in recent months.

The idea behind the scheme, as the president's statement explained it, is to permit banks holding mortgages on homes to rediscount those mortgages with the new banks. Local banks can pass on this relief from pressure of credits falling due to the home owner or builder.

Many banks onw hold mortgages on homes that are past due and owners cannot meet them. Banks and building and loan associations do not want to foreclose. They would then find themselves owning an increasingly great number of houses and land from which they deprived no income but on which they had to pay taxes and upkeep.

The 12 new home loan discount banks, or fewer if that number is not necessary, would have an original combined capital of $150,000,000 under the Hoover plan. This would make it possible for them to rediscount mortgages up to $1,800,000,000.

The money would be raised locally in designated sections. If a section failed to subscribe the capital needed for the local new bank, the government would make up the total. But a scheme has been included to turn over the government's stock to private ownership as rapidly as possible.

Each bank is to have an initial capital of from $5,000,000 to $30,000,000, depending on the need in its district.

GOPHERS' SECONDS ROMP OVER CORNELL IN FIRST HALF 34 TO 0

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—using the reserves, Minnesota football team made their final home game of the regular season today against the Cornell team from Mount Vernon, Iowa.

First Quarter

Minnesota marched down the field with four first downs and within a few minutes, Griffin plunged one yard for a touchdown. The try for point failed. Score Minnesota 6, Cornell 0. After several passes and first down, Champlin went over for the second touchdown. A pass, Champlin to Krezowski made the score Minnesota 13, Cornell 0. Schwartz ran 30 yards for the third touchdown when he caught a pass from Champlin. The extra point point was good. The quarter ended with the score, Minnesota 20, Cornell 0.

Second Quarter

Except for Stein, a complete new Minnesota team went in at the beginning of the second quarter. Manders broke away for a touchdown. Walter Hass kicked goal, making the score, Minnesota 27, Cornell 0. After a long pass in which he figured, Sommers plunged 5 yards for a touchdown. Haas failed to kick. Score, Minnesota 33, Cornell 0. Several Minnesota regulars were replaced. Score for quarter, Minnesota 20, Cornell 0, making the score at half, Minnesota 34, Cornell 0.

Falls to Fame

Seattle, Wash.—Dr. Joe Brugman is the talk of hunting circles in this city. Out for deer recently, Brugman heard a shot and then saw his guide running back with the information that he had shot at and msised a big bear. Brugman hurried to the scene of the battle and, in doing so, tripped and fell over a cliff. He picked himself up at the bottom to find himself confronting the enraged bruin. Without taking aim, the doctor fired and killed the bear.

50 Years of Efficient Performance

Pioneering for Fifty Years

Fifty years ago we were pioneers in banking. Today we try to maintain that same spirit of adventure and exploration that guided our efforts half a century ago. It keeps us young in spite of our age. It keeps us ever alert for new things, new habits, new modes of living. It keeps us still pioneers in a business that demands an active finger on the pulse of conditions. That pioneering policy has stood us in good stead during the past fifty years—it will help in the next fifty.

"BETTY LOU" IS COMING TO BRAINERD

She's coming in person—Betty Lou, herself! Betty Lou is a nationally known shopping expert. She has visited stores in hundreds of cities, and now she is coming to see the stores of Brainerd.

Through special arrangements, just completed, Betty Lou will take charge of a shopping department in The Daily Dispatch and will give our readers the benefit of her wide experience as a buyer of merchandise.

Betty Lou is expected to arrive about Wednesday. Watch for further announcements.

Falls to Fame

Seattle, Wash.—Dr. Joe Brugman is the talk of hunting circles in this city. Out for deer recently, Brugman heard a shot and then saw his guide running back with the information that he had shot at and msised a big bear. Brugman hurried to the scene of the battle and, in doing so, tripped and fell over a cliff. He picked himself up at the bottom to find himself confronting the enraged bruin. Without taking aim, the doctor fired and killed the bear.

50 Years of Efficient Performance

Pioneering for Fifty Years

Fifty years ago we were pioneers in banking. Today we try to maintain that same spirit of adventure and exploration that guided our efforts half a century ago. It keeps us young in spite of our age. It keeps us ever alert for new things, new habits, new modes of living. It keeps us still pioneers in a business that demands an active finger on the pulse of conditions. That pioneering policy has stood us in good stead during the past fifty years—it will help in the next fifty.

BRAINERD SHOULD INVITE SMALL INDUSTRIES---

Brainerd can hardly be classed along with cities which, in a measure, owe their existence or at least their expansion, to industry. Neither can it be placed along with those devoid of any type of manufacturing or other industrial enterprises.

But, Brainerd should look forward to opportunities to obtain industrial establishments and should prepare itself to present its advantages intelligently and conscientiously to make an honest endeavor along this line. And, it should not wait until the opportunity presents itself but should be alert to any possibility of landing manufacturing or other industrial plants for this city.

The old proverb: "Tall oaks from litlte acorns grow," is an apt axiom to remember in seeking industrial enterprises. The Daily Dispatch believes the odds are in favor of a small light manufacturing industry than in attempting to land an old established industry that must simply get out of the high taxation district of the larger city or find room for expansion. True, Brainerd would not turn down an opportunity to consider such a chance but they are so few and far between that it cannot afford to lose time waiting for one of this type and let the small plants go to the other cities.

Most of the great factories of the country grew from small beginnings. Founded on an idea or a product, they started small.

The coming of an immense industry to a town may be a good thing for that town—or may do it actual injury. If it causes folks to overlook the little industries, the acorns that might grow into oaks, it may retard development. Many small industries are safer as a foundation for prosperity. Diversified as to products and markets, they are not likely all to suffer at the same time from fluctuation which, in a big industry, may throw hundreds out of work in a moment.

Brainerd will do well for itself and for its neighboring farms and cities if it makes t a point to invite and foster the little fellows. A score of them, employing 50 or 100 or more persons, will be better for the community than any one big institution employing several thousands.

A dozen acorns will produce more sound timber in the course of time than one big tree transplanted.

WHEN RESOURCES END!---

Not quite like a mysterious finger writing a prophecy of doom on the palace wall, but rather ominous just the same, was a recent forecast in a middle western banking magazine that present reserves of high grade iron ore in the Lake Superior district will be entirely enhausted in less than 30 years if present rates of shipment prevail.

Of course, new deposits may be found in the rich Minnesota and Michigan ranges. If not, there are extensive low-grade reserves there which may, through some cheap new process, become commercially available. If not, there are still vast deposits elsewhere in America, and water transportation is still cheap. And yet—

The forecast, somehow, is discomforting. For it points to a fact that we like to forget; the fact that there is to be, some day, an inevitable end to the natural resources of the earth. Oil, iron, coal—some day, soon or late, mankind will have used up the last of them, and there will be no possibility of getting any more.

In former ages, perhaps, this would not have mattered quite so much. But the civilization that is being developed now is founded, in a peculiarly intimate way, on just those commodities. Skyscrapers, railroads, automobiles, all the great machines that do the work of the world—they come back to this triumvirate inescapably.

To be sure, a cheap synthetic gasoline will be devised some day. Water power may replace coal very nicely. But who ever heard of a synthetic steel? Can you imagine a paper-mache skyscraper, or a locomotive built of cornstalk fibers?

Yet this approaching end of the great age of steel is a certainty which we need to look at occasionally. We need to be reminded that we are not building for eternity any more than the Babylonians did. The proudest city sky line will some day vanish. The most mposing manufacturing district will lose its smoke-cloud. These things constitute, not an everlasting framework for human activities, but an insubstantial back-drop which will presently be removed.

Development of the air mail system at government expense has probably done more than any other factor to promote the rise of commercial aviation lines in the United States. Yet the whole vast job has really cost the taxpayer comparatively little.

Charles L. Lawrence, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, Inc., revealed the other day that in the last 14 years the federal government has spent just a little less than $67,000,000 on its airmail system. This includes everything, from operation costs to the establishment and maintenance of the great lighted airways.

Considering the service that the airmail has rendered, together with the extensive spread of privately owned commercial air lines, it is easy to see that Uncle Sam got full value for his money.

As the autumn football season approaches its close, it is becoming apparent that the gate receipts at the college ticket offices have fallen off sharply from former years. A part of this, undoubtedly, is due to the business depresssion; yet there are indications that some of the shrinkage, at least, is due to a failing in public interest. Football isn't quite the drawing card it used to be.

It may be that this tendency will disappear in the next year or so. But if it does not—if college football has to accustom itself to a definitely small income—most of the evils of "overemphasis" will vanish of themselves. For those evils stem directly from the big profits winning teams roll up. If the profits shrink the evils will shrink accordingly.

The newspapers recently published an extremely instructive picture of an automobile accident—or rather, of two accidents.

One car had gone into a ditch, through some luckless skid or other. Another car passed by. The driver craned his neck to see the first accident, forgot to keep both eyes on the road ahead, and presently his car was wrecked too.

This sort of thing happens rather often; and it ought to be an object lesson to all motorists. Looking at the sights along the way is all very well, but the driver's first job is to watch where he is going. He lets other things distract his attention at his peril.

If you see a car in the ditch, and feel the need of inspecting it closely, park your own car first—or you may land in the ditch yourself and take some unoffending fellow-motorist with you.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARY HARKNESS undertakes to trap THE FLY, who she believes "framed" her brother, EDDIE, with the murder of MRS. JUPITER, and later ran Eddie down and killed him to keep him from telling. As bait she plans to use the famous Jupiter necklace of rubies, which the murderer failed to get.

She is aided by BOWEN of the Star. Mary's fiance, DIRK RUYTHER, and his family stop the official investigation, objecting to the notoriety. They believe Eddie guilty.

BRUCE JUPITER, absent many years, returns from Europe with a woman friend. His father orders him out and makes Mary his heir. Bruce swears to rout Mary, who he thinks is a gold-digger. Mary and Dirk quarrel because Dirk is jealous of Bowen and refuses to believe in the existence of The Fly. Dirk goes about again with his former sweetheart, CORNELIA TABOR, who is trying to win him back.

Dirk is torn between his love and belief that Bruce's suspicions are correct. He quarrels with Mary when she will not promise not to go to Miami with MR. JUPITER on his yacht, the "Gypsy." Mary goes because Bowen tells her The Fly will be at Hialeah to see his horse run.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

AS the rented roadster spun along the white Florida road toward Miami late in the afternoon of October 16 Mary was uneasily conscious of Bruce's presence beside her. He still wore his cynical air, but now with some reason, as she realized with vexation.

This visit to the Hialeah racetrack from which she had hoped so much had turned up exactly nothing. "The Fly will be there if he's alive," George Bowen had said. Well, they had spent the afternoon looking for him and obtained not so much as a glimpse. It was almost an impossible task to find anyone in the huge crowd and it was made more exasperating by the constant feel of Bruce's mocking eyes upon her.

In self-defense, Mary had kept her eyes glued to field-glasses—turned not upon the track, however, but upon the boxes. Satisfied that her quarry was not there, she had systematically raked the stands, tier by tier. But The Fly, if he was present, had eluded her. What her next move should be, she did not know.

If silence prevailed in the front seat, however, there was compensating animation behind. The countess and Bates, who was a private detective when not posing as an inventor of a new form of aircraft, anxious to win Jupiter backing had evidently found the enforced proximity of the rumble seat conducive to quick acquaintance. They laughed and chatted like two children.

The countess was unduly pleased over her winnings on a horse which she had chosen by the simple process of shutting her eyes and poking at the list of entries with a pencil. The horse, a 10 to one shot, had come home in the money. The countess seemed to regard her luck as a good augury, or perhaps she needed the money. At any rate, her gayety rasped Mary's nerves. Mary had watched the little black filly, La Mosca, who was touted as the favorite, stumble when the race was half won and lag home far in the lee. She was not superstitious, but she almost believed in signs, too, for the moment.

Well, anyway, there it was on the chart—"La Mosca, filly 3-year-old, trainer, K. Jones, owner, H. De Loma." At least, she had a name to go on. Had Bowen been there today to see the race run? She wondered where Bowen was and if he had given up the chase altogether. If he had come, as he said he might, she had seen nothing of him as yet but the 'Gypsy' had docked only the day before.

She sent the car along at breakneck pace, swinging past car after car on the crowded road in her hurry to get back to Miami and ask for mail at the hotel. Dirk had not written but she had not given up hoping. The party had discarded the idea of staying on the "Gypsy," and had taken rooms at the Ambassador. Already the busy pens of society reporters had broadcast the party's presence. If Dirk had been uncertain where to write her, he need be no longer. Now if he did not write she would know why.

• • •

AT the hotel Mary went immediately to ask for her mail and as she turned away from the window disappointed, found Bates at her elbow.

"They've gone into the bar," he said. "Listen, have you got a camera?"

"No. Why? Heaven knows this is no pleasure trip for me!"

"Can you get one? And cook up some excuse for taking that woman's picture? I want to send it back to the police department in New York. I've seen her face somewhere, either in the line-up or maybe on one of those posters the Surete sends over for us to look at."

"Maybe you've just seen her in the roto sections," Mary suggested indifferently. "She's a sort of minor nobility, you know. At least, her husband was."

"Yes. Very minor," Bates agreed dryly. "Well, how about it?"

"I'll get one, of course, if you think it worth while. But hadn't you better forget the Countess and think of The Fly? Crook or no crook, you seemed to enjoy yourself with her this afternoon," she rallied him.

"Sure, I kid her along," he answered, unsmiling, "and you'd better, too. I'll bet she's a mean baby when she's riled."

Mary did not appear to be listening. Inside, she felt as if she were slowly turning to stone. If Dirk did not write tomorrow—if he didn't write at all—

Bates saw that she was not paying attention. He touched her arm. "You listening?" he said sharply. And when she gave him her attention he added, "What I mean is if anybody copped her boy-friend, now, she'd shoot—get me?"

Mary laughed.

"Nothing is further from my thoughts," she waved him away. Obviously he had misunderstood the mock gallantry with which Bruce treated her. Angrily, she resolved to free herself of Bruce. It was a nuisance, having him always at her heels and besides it meant associating with the Countess, which was more than she could stomach.

Mr. Jupiter had included the woman in the party, partly as a gesture of conciliation toward Bruce, partly because her nominal status as a matron gave Mary chaperonage, of a sort.

"Ah, there you are!" the Countess cried as Mary and Bates came up. "You will come with us, yes?" She dislodged one hand from Jupiter's arm to place it supplicatingly upon Bates' tweed sleeve. An expression of exaggerated eagerness lighted her face, the heavy red lips were parted childishly. She seemed to be asking some priceless boon, when as a matter of fact she was merely asking him to dinner. Mary looked away in disgust.

"We celebrate my winnings," the other woman prattled on. She cuddled the old man's arm within her own, lowered her voice coquettishly. "These people must be made gay. They are very bad gamblers, these foolish ones—they bet on the favorite!" She lifted sleepy, malicious eyes to Mary, let them slip over the girl insolently, before turning to the old man again. "One should nev-air bet on the favorite to win Monsieur Jupiter, isn't that so?"

• • •

BRUCE interrupted smoothly, addressing no one in particular. "Louise proposes a dinner-party. She is entranced with the Ambassador roof which is all dressed up for tomorrow night's fete. As a commentary upon her taste, I regret to say the decor consists principally of red balloons." The Countess and he exchanged a quick, unreadable glance. Mary was sure there was unfriendliness in it, but she had no interest in the love spats of such a disagreeable pair.

"Old Man" Jupiter lifted his stiff frame from the divan with an effort. "Let's go eat," he said, shortly.

The Countess pouted. "Oh, but we must dress first!" she wailed, in mock dismay. Jupiter said, "Well, hurry up," and sank down again. The Countess' eyes glittered for an instant but she took Bruce's arm and departed. Evidently Jupiter meant to cling to his linens but Bates agreed cheerfully. He was enjoying himself.

Mary said wearily, "I'll go, too. I've quarts of dust down my back." She did not want to report her failure to Mr. Jupiter just then.

Under the door of her room she found a slip of paper, a printed blank headed "Telephone Calls." Beneath was written: "Call Mr. Bowen at Shore 61." So he was there! Happily she heard him answer her pleased "Hello!"

"Were you at the track this afternoon?" she asked. It seemed incredible that she could have missed him. Her eyes burned, her head ached, she was almost sun-blind from that constant searching, searching of faces. "Where were you?"

"Where was I? Back in the paddock, sister, getting an earful. Want to buy a horse?"

"A horse? What on earth for?"

"For the price of her oats. She won't be much good as a racer. De Loma kicked hell out of her for throwing the race, I understand. He must have had a wad of jack on her. Listen, is it true you've got the knick-knack with you?"

Mary hesitated. "What about it?"

"Well, he's flat. Stony. I hear the hotel's dogging him for his room rent. He tried to give them the old racket that his title gave the joint social glitter. He's calling himself Count De Loma. That's a laugh! The Ambassador's thrown out better titles than his. If it is his!"

"The Ambassador? He's here?"

"If they haven't chucked him out, bag and baggage. Better get the necklace out and give him a flash of it, quick. He'll leap at it. But lay your plans first, kid, for he'll mean business when he strikes!"

A slim hand encircled the girl's throat, where a pulse beat chokingly.

"You've got me—rattled," she gasped. "Come and tell me what I ought to do. I hadn't dreamed he was here! Why, he may be next door, right now, or—" She looked about fearfully and lowered her voice.

"Oh, no. He's in Parlor C. Throws a front, that guy. Where'll I see you? I am not stopping at the Ambassador, need I say? I'm here on my own; the paper wouldn't send me, so I quit."

• • •

A BELLBOY stuck his head in the door in response to her "Come in," and said, "Your party's gone upstairs, Miss Harkness. They ask you to join them on the roof."

Mary nodded. She told Bowen her immediate plans, and arranged to slip away and meet him as soon as possible after dinner.

Trembling with suppressed excitement, she tugged at her big wardrobe trunk, hastily conning her small array of evening dresses. Her hand fell on the Paris dress. Well, if the Countess wanted a party, she should have one. She dressed with great care. She always felt like a schoolgirl beside that experienced lady, anyway, but it would help some to know she was looking well.

When she stepped out of the elevator she found Bates—a surprisingly altered Bates, resplendent in evening clothes—pacing the lounge, waiting for her.

"That dame gives me the creeps," he confided in an undertone as he met her. "I've tailed some shady propositions in my day, but—" he shook his head to indicate bafflement. "It's just like I said," he added disgustedly. "They're fighting already."

"Fighting? Who?"

"Him and her. Young Jupiter and the Countess. They went at it hot and heavy the minute she got in her room and he in his. Their rooms are connecting, you know. He thinks she's making too much of a play for his father and she says what's he always hanging around after you for, if he hates you so much. You've got her going, kid!"

Mary's laugh bubbled up and over. "Oh, that's too funny!"

Still smiling, she followed the head waiter across the room toward the balcony table at which their party was seated. Heads turned as she passed. The room was only half filled, owing to the early hour, but within a moment after the first lackadaisical diner had looked up to see who was coming in, the last man in the farthest corner had received, by a sort of electric current, the word that a strikingly pretty girl was crossing the room and he was craning his neck to catch sight of her.

What he saw made him pause open-mouthed, and put down his fork. He recognized the girl instantly and sat for a few minutes wrapped in deep thought. When he could, without making himself conspicuous, he managed to see who her companions were . . . and a fresh shock awaited him. The woman in the silver dress . . . who was she? . . . could she possibly be . . . and what was she doing with the Harkness girl who was his own special prey?

He finished his meal hurriedly and looked again. It was she! The Countess, looking up just a moment later, missed the look that crossed his face and as quickly erased itself dog who sees another running away—the look of a particularly vicious with his bone. After the first surprised instant of recognition she smiled and cried out, in her usual note of false gaiety, "Enrique!" and half rose to greet him.

The man came forward, a mask settling down over his own features, and bowed over her hand. An odd flush came into her sallow cheeks as she presented him to the others.

"This is my most dear friend, Count Enrique De Loma!"

BRAINERD SHOULD INVITE SMALL INDUSTRIES---

Brainerd can hardly be classed along with cities which, in a measure, owe their existence or at least their expansion, to industry. Neither can it be placed along with those devoid of any type of manufacturing or other industrial enterprises.

But, Brainerd should look forward to opportunities to obtain industrial establishments and should prepare itself to present its advantages intelligently and conscientiously to make an honest endeavor along this line. And, it should not wait until the opportunity presents itself but should be alert to any possibility of landing manufacturing or other industrial plants for this city.

The old proverb: "Tall oaks from litlte acorns grow," is an apt axiom to remember in seeking industrial enterprises. The Daily Dispatch believes the odds are in favor of a small light manufacturing industry than in attempting to land an old established industry that must simply get out of the high taxation district of the larger city or find room for expansion. True, Brainerd would not turn down an opportunity to consider such a chance but they are so few and far between that it cannot afford to lose time waiting for one of this type and let the small plants go to the other cities.

Most of the great factories of the country grew from small beginnings. Founded on an idea or a product, they started small.

The coming of an immense industry to a town may be a good thing for that town—or may do it actual injury. If it causes folks to overlook the little industries, the acorns that might grow into oaks, it may retard development. Many small industries are safer as a foundation for prosperity. Diversified as to products and markets, they are not likely all to suffer at the same time from fluctuation which, in a big industry, may throw hundreds out of work in a moment.

Brainerd will do well for itself and for its neighboring farms and cities if it makes t a point to invite and foster the little fellows. A score of them, employing 50 or 100 or more persons, will be better for the community than any one big institution employing several thousands.

A dozen acorns will produce more sound timber in the course of time than one big tree transplanted.

WHEN RESOURCES END!---

Not quite like a mysterious finger writing a prophecy of doom on the palace wall, but rather ominous just the same, was a recent forecast in a middle western banking magazine that present reserves of high grade iron ore in the Lake Superior district will be entirely enhausted in less than 30 years if present rates of shipment prevail.

Of course, new deposits may be found in the rich Minnesota and Michigan ranges. If not, there are extensive low-grade reserves there which may, through some cheap new process, become commercially available. If not, there are still vast deposits elsewhere in America, and water transportation is still cheap. And yet—

The forecast, somehow, is discomforting. For it points to a fact that we like to forget; the fact that there is to be, some day, an inevitable end to the natural resources of the earth. Oil, iron, coal—some day, soon or late, mankind will have used up the last of them, and there will be no possibility of getting any more.

In former ages, perhaps, this would not have mattered quite so much. But the civilization that is being developed now is founded, in a peculiarly intimate way, on just those commodities. Skyscrapers, railroads, automobiles, all the great machines that do the work of the world—they come back to this triumvirate inescapably.

To be sure, a cheap synthetic gasoline will be devised some day. Water power may replace coal very nicely. But who ever heard of a synthetic steel? Can you imagine a paper-mache skyscraper, or a locomotive built of cornstalk fibers?

Yet this approaching end of the great age of steel is a certainty which we need to look at occasionally. We need to be reminded that we are not building for eternity any more than the Babylonians did. The proudest city sky line will some day vanish. The most mposing manufacturing district will lose its smoke-cloud. These things constitute, not an everlasting framework for human activities, but an insubstantial back-drop which will presently be removed.

Development of the air mail system at government expense has probably done more than any other factor to promote the rise of commercial aviation lines in the United States. Yet the whole vast job has really cost the taxpayer comparatively little.

Charles L. Lawrence, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, Inc., revealed the other day that in the last 14 years the federal government has spent just a little less than $67,000,000 on its airmail system. This includes everything, from operation costs to the establishment and maintenance of the great lighted airways.

Considering the service that the airmail has rendered, together with the extensive spread of privately owned commercial air lines, it is easy to see that Uncle Sam got full value for his money.

As the autumn football season approaches its close, it is becoming apparent that the gate receipts at the college ticket offices have fallen off sharply from former years. A part of this, undoubtedly, is due to the business depresssion; yet there are indications that some of the shrinkage, at least, is due to a failing in public interest. Football isn't quite the drawing card it used to be.

It may be that this tendency will disappear in the next year or so. But if it does not—if college football has to accustom itself to a definitely small income—most of the evils of "over-emphasis" will vanish of themselves. For those evils stem directly from the big profits winning teams roll up. If the profits shrink the evils will shrink accordingly.

The newspapers recently published an extremely instructive picture of an automobile accident—or rather, of two accidents.

One car had gone into a ditch, through some luckless skid or other. Another car passed by. The driver craned his neck to see the first accident, forgot to keep both eyes on the road ahead, and presently his car was wrecked too.

This sort of thing happens rather often; and it ought to be an object lesson to all motorists. Looking at the sights along the way is all very well, but the driver's first job is to watch where he is going. He lets other things distract his attention at his peril.

If you see a car in the ditch, and feel the need of inspecting it closely, park your own car first—or you may land in the ditch yourself and take some unoffending fellow-motorist with you.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARY HARKNESS undertakes to trap THE FLY, who she believes "framed" her brother, EDDIE, with the murder of MRS. JUPITER, and later ran Eddie down and killed him to keep him from telling. As bait she plans to use the famous Jupiter necklace of rubies, which the murderer failed to get.

She is aided by BOWEN of the Star. Mary's fiance, DIRK RUYTHER, and his family stop the official investigation, objecting to the notoriety. They believe Eddie guilty.

BRUCE JUPITER, absent many years, returns from Europe with a woman friend. His father orders him out and makes Mary his heir. Bruce swears to rout Mary, who he thinks is a gold-digger. Mary and Dirk quarrel because Dirk is jealous of Bowen and refuses to believe in the existence of The Fly. Dirk goes about again with his former sweetheart, CORNELIA TABOR, who is trying to win him back.

Dirk is torn between his love and belief that Bruce's suspicions are correct. He quarrels with Mary when she will not promise not to go to Miami with MR. JUPITER on his yacht, the "Gypsy." Mary goes because Bowen tells her The Fly will be at Hialeah to see his horse run.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

AS the rented roadster spun along the white Florida road toward Miami late in the afternoon of October 16 Mary was uneasily conscious of Bruce's presence beside her. He still wore his cynical air, but now with some reason, as she realized with vexation.

This visit to the Hialeah racetrack from which she had hoped so much had turned up exactly nothing. "The Fly will be there if he's alive," George Bowen had said. Well, they had spent the afternoon looking for him and obtained not so much as a glimpse. It was almost an impossible task to find anyone in the huge crowd and it was made more exasperating by the constant feel of Bruce's mocking eyes upon her.

In self-defense, Mary had kept her eyes glued to field-glasses—turned not upon the track, however, but upon the boxes. Satisfied that her quarry was not there, she had systematically raked the stands, tier by tier. But The Fly, if he was present, had eluded her. What her next move should be, she did not know.

If silence prevailed in the front seat, however, there was compensating animation behind. The countess and Bates, who was a private detective when not posing as an inventor of a new form of aircraft, anxious to win Jupiter backing had evidently found the enforced proximity of the rumble seat conducive to quick acquaintance. They laughed and chatted like two children.

The countess was unduly pleased over her winnings on a horse which she had chosen by the simple process of shutting her eyes and poking at the list of entries with a pencil. The horse, a 10 to one shot, had come home in the money. The countess seemed to regard her luck as a good augury, or perhaps she needed the money. At any rate, her gayety rasped Mary's nerves. Mary had watched the little black filly, La Mosca, who was touted as the favorite, stumble when the race was half won and lag home far in the lee. She was not superstitious, but she almost believed in signs, too, for the moment.

Well, anyway, there it was on the chart—"La Mosca, filly 3-year-old, trainer, K. Jones, owner, H. De Loma." At least, she had a name to go on. Had Bowen been there today to see the race run? She wondered where Bowen was and if he had given up the chase altogether. If he had come, as he said he might, she had seen nothing of him as yet but the 'Gypsy' had docked only the day before.

She sent the car along at breakneck pace, swinging past car after car on the crowded road in her hurry to get back to Miami and ask for mail at the hotel. Dirk had not written but she had not given up hoping. The party had discarded the idea of staying on the "Gypsy," and had taken rooms at the Ambassador. Already the busy pens of society reporters had broadcast the party's presence. If Dirk had been uncertain where to write her, he need be no longer. Now if he did not write she would know why.

• • •

AT the hotel Mary went immediately to ask for her mail and as she turned away from the window disappointed, found Bates at her elbow.

"They've gone into the bar," he said. "Listen, have you got a camera?"

"No. Why? Heaven knows this is no pleasure trip for me!"

"Can you get one? And cook up some excuse for taking that woman's picture? I want to send it back to the police department in New York. I've seen her face somewhere, either in the line-up or maybe on one of those posters the Surete sends over for us to look at."

"Maybe you've just seen her in the roto sections," Mary suggested indifferently. "She's a sort of minor nobility, you know. At least, her husband was."

"Yes. Very minor," Bates agreed dryly. "Well, how about it?"

"I'll get one, of course, if you think it worth while. But hadn't you better forget the Countess and think of The Fly? Crook or no crook, you seemed to enjoy yourself with her this afternoon," she rallied him.

"Sure, I kid her along," he answered, unsmiling, "and you'd better, too. I'll bet she's a mean baby when she's riled."

Mary did not appear to be listening. Inside, she felt as if she were slowly turning to stone. If Dirk did not write tomorrow—if he didn't write at all—

Bates saw that she was not paying attention. He touched her arm. "You listening?" he said sharply. And when she gave him her attention he added, "What I mean is if anybody copped her boy-friend, now, she'd shoot—get me?"

Mary laughed.

"Nothing is further from my thoughts," she waved him away. Obviously he had misunderstood the mock gallantry with which Bruce treated her. Angrily, she resolved to free herself of Bruce. It was a nuisance, having him always at her heels and besides it meant associating with the Countess, which was more than she could stomach.

Mr. Jupiter had included the woman in the party, partly as a gesture of conciliation toward Bruce, partly because her nominal status as a matron gave Mary chaperonage, of a sort.

"Ah, there you are!" the Countess cried as Mary and Bates came up. "You will come with us, yes?" She dislodged one hand from Jupiter's arm to place it supplicatingly upon Bates' tweed sleeve. An expression of exaggerated eagerness lighted her face, the heavy red lips were parted childishly. She seemed to be asking some priceless boon, when as a matter of fact she was merely asking him to dinner. Mary looked away in disgust.

"We celebrate my winnings," the other woman prattled on. She cuddled the old man's arm within her own, lowered her voice coquettishly. "These people must be made gay. They are very bad gamblers, these foolish ones—they bet on the favorite!" She lifted sleepy, malicious eyes to Mary, let them slip over the girl insolently, before turning to the old man again. "One should nev-air bet on the favorite to win Monsieur Jupiter, isn't that so?"

• • •

BRUCE interrupted smoothly, addressing no one in particular. "Louise proposes a dinner-party. She is entranced with the Ambassador roof which is all dressed up for tomorrow night's fete. As a commentary upon her taste, I regret to say the decor consists principally of red balloons." The Countess and he exchanged a quick, unreadable glance. Mary was sure there was unfriendliness in it, but she had no interest in the love spats of such a disagreeable pair.

"Old Man" Jupiter lifted his stiff frame from the divan with an effort. "Let's go eat," he said, shortly.

The Countess pouted. "Oh, but we must dress first!" she wailed, in mock dismay. Jupiter said, "Well, hurry up," and sank down again. The Countess' eyes glittered for an instant but she took Bruce's arm and departed. Evidently Jupiter meant to cling to his linens but Bates agreed cheerfully. He was enjoying himself.

Mary said wearily, "I'll go, too. I've quarts of dust down my back." She did not want to report her failure to Mr. Jupiter just then.

Under the door of her room she found a slip of paper, a printed blank headed "Telephone Calls." Beneath was written: "Call Mr. Bowen at Shore 61." So he was there! Happily she heard him answer her pleased "Hello!"

"Were you at the track this afternoon?" she asked. It seemed incredible that she could have missed him. Her eyes burned, her head ached, she was almost sun-blind from that constant searching, searching of faces. "Where were you?"

"Where was I? Back in the paddock, sister, getting an earful. Want to buy a horse?"

"A horse? What on earth for?"

"For the price of her oats. She won't be much good as a racer. De Loma kicked hell out of her for throwing the race, I understand. He must have had a wad of jack on her. Listen, is it true you've got the knick-knack with you?"

Mary hesitated. "What about it?"

"Well, he's flat. Stony. I hear the hotel's dogging him for his room rent. He tried to give them the old racket that his title gave the joint social glitter. He's calling himself Count De Loma. That's a laugh! The Ambassador's thrown out better titles than his. If it is his!"

"The Ambassador? He's here?"

"If they haven't chucked him out, bag and baggage. Better get the necklace out and give him a flash of it, quick. He'll leap at it. But lay your plans first, kid, for he'll mean business when he strikes!"

A slim hand encircled the girl's throat, where a pulse beat chokingly.

"You've got me—rattled," she gasped. "Come and tell me what I ought to do. I hadn't dreamed he was here! Why, he may be next door, right now, or—" She looked about fearfully and lowered her voice.

"Oh, no. He's in Parlor C. Throws a front, that guy. Where'll I see you? I am not stopping at the Ambassador, need I say? I'm here on my own; the paper wouldn't send me, so I quit."

• • •

A BELLBOY stuck his head in the door in response to her "Come in," and said, "Your party's gone upstairs, Miss Harkness. They ask you to join them on the roof."

Mary nodded. She told Bowen her immediate plans, and arranged to slip away and meet him as soon as possible after dinner.

It's Up to You to Loosen Them

Brainerd merchants have shown their loyalty. 100 per cent strong through the years, they have boosted Brainerd industry. Now in a fine spirit of co-operation they have aligned themselves with the "Ship and Travel by Rail Movement."

Are you, as employees of our two great railroad systems, going to co-operate by trading in Brainerd with the men who have constantly pushed and fought for your welfare?

Of course you are. It's a mutual undersanding to help each other. The merchants appreciate your business; you appreciate their co-operation.

"Ship and Travel by Rail"

Individually and collectively, the merchants have bid for your business. Some have been loyal, a majority perhaps. But there are others, who, through possibly lack of foresight, haven't considered their home town merchant.

It's a great cause for which we all are fighting. A worthy project for any community to co-operate with to the fullest extent.

The merchants have responded . . . . now it's up to you as employees of our two great railroads, and as citizens of this community to show your true colors by

PACKERS, WITH THREE DEFEATS IN 43 GAMES, INVADE EAST

PROS TO MEET EAST'S STRONGEST TEAMS ON EXTENSIVE TRIP

DURING LAST THREE YEARS, PACKERS HAVE WON PRO TITLE TWICE

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 14—There are football teams and football teams—but a professional team from a comparatively small city in Wisconsin has won the championship of the National Professional Football League for two successive years, and has only been defeated three times in 43 games.

The three games the Green Bay Packers lost were against the New York Giants, Chicago Bears and Chicago Cardinals last year.

In 1929 the Packers came through the season undefeated. They trounced the New York Giants, led by Benny Friedman, twice, and the Chicago Bears, led by "Red" Grange, three times. The Packers were the only team in the history of the National "Pro" League to win the championship two successive times.

The Packers have played and won nine games this season. They left Green Bay the other day for an extensive road trip through the east. They are scheduled to play "pro" league teams in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Portsmouth, O.. They will be on the road four weeks, but the Green Bay and Wisconsin "pro" football fans are confident that when they return here they will have another national championship in their duffle bags.

The Packers are coached by Earl L. (Curly) Lambeau, a football pupil of Rockne and a half-back running mate of George Gipp. Heartley Anderson, present Notre Dame coach, was a lineman on that team. Lambeau is a Green Bay boy.

When the season ends early in December, Lambeau immediately begins building for the following season, and looks over the field of "pro" prospects—men who will graduate the following June.

Coach Lambeau has the knack of taking players cast off by other "pro" teams and making stars out of them; he also can take some player from a secondary school and groom him to compete with the best in the country.

The Packers' personnel changes from year to year. Every fall sees from five to six new faces in the squad. This year the Packers have such newcomers as "Hank" Bruder, star Northwestern back last year; Russell Saunders, All-America halfback at Southern California in 1929; Frank Baker, All-America end at Northwestern in 1930; Roger Grove, star quarterback from Michigan State; Milton Gantenbein of LaCrosse, Wis., captain and All-Conference end on the Wisconsin 'varsity last year, and Waldo E. Don Carlos, center at Drake in 1930.

Reputations earned in college mean nothing to the paid "gridders." They take great delight in tossing some highly press-agented All-America chap for a loss. One of the best "pro" backfield prospects in years as far as the Packers are concerned is Saunders. Saunders, who ran through the whole Notre Dame team for 95 yards in that historic Chicago game in 1929, is not only a shifty runner but a smart defensive player and has won a home here.

The Packer players come from 20 different colleges and universities. When they come to Green Bay they rae taught a modified Notre Dame system of football and so far it has been almost unstoppable. The squad has 10 All-America players on it. They include "Red" Sleight, Purdue, '29; "Cal" Hubbard, Geneva, '25; Lavvie Dilweg, Marquette, '28; Frank Baker, Northwestern, '30; Russell Saunders, Southern California, '29; Nate Barrager, Southern California, '29; Tom Nash, Georgia, '27; Hurdis McCrary, Georgia, '28, and "Red" Dunn, Marquette, '26.

The Packer games played at City Stadium here, atract from 10,000 to 16,000 fans from all over Wisconsin and upper Michigan. For the Bear game, early this season, the stadium was sold out and 5000 requests for tickets were returned.

The Green Bay Football Corporation owns the Packers. The corporation, a non-profit organization, is composed of Green Bay citizens. They come from all walks of life—barbers, railroad brakemen and conductors, machinists, paper mill workers, physicians and surgeons, dentists and lawyers. The affair of the club are administered by a board of directors elected each year by the stockholders.

The president is usually some leading business or professional man, who serves without pay. If there are any profits at the end of the season, part is turned over to the American Legion, part of it is put back into the stadium, which was built with "pro" football profits and which the high school teams use, and part is put into thec lub treasury for use on a "rainy day."

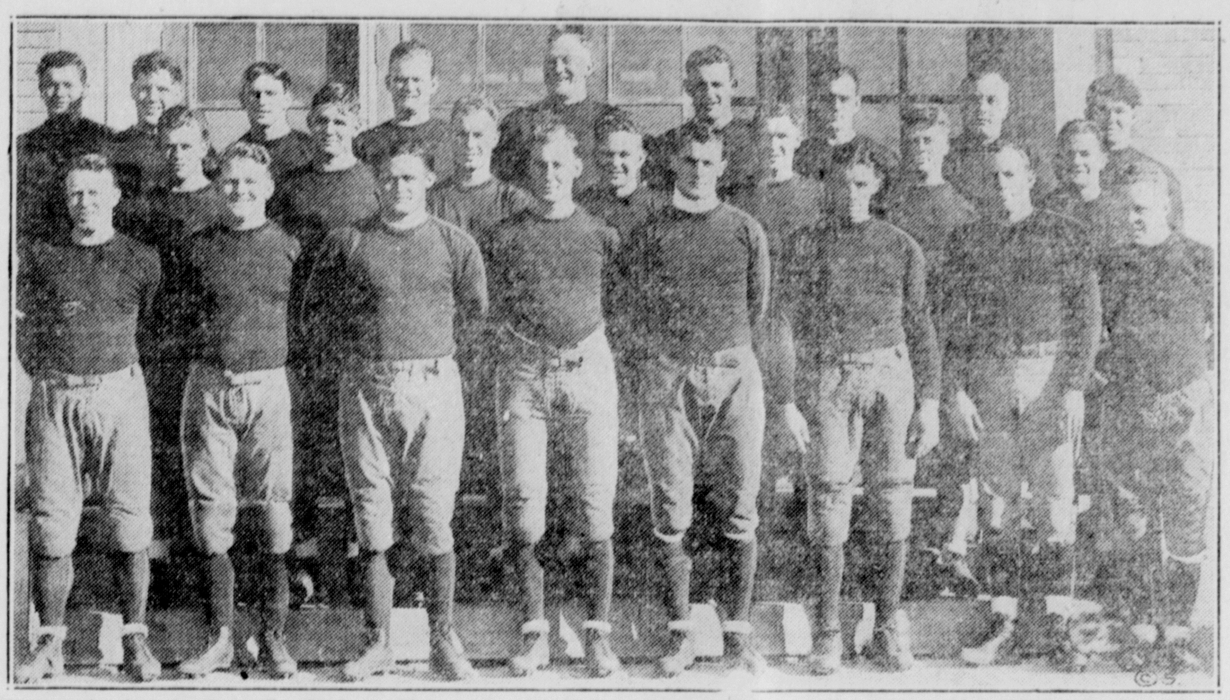

The team is looked upon as a civic enterprise and no effort is made to show a big profit each season, although the Packers are the greatest drawing card in the "pro" league. Last year they played before 45,000 in the Yankee Stadium in New York. A few Sundays ago 35,000 saw them defeat the Chicago Bears, 6 to 2.

TULANE, GEORGIA CLASH HEADLINES DAY'S GRID CARD

SOUTH ALSO PROVIDES NO. 2 GAME BETWEEN VANDERBILT AND TENNESSEE

New York, Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—With the 1931 football season approaching its close, today's national football schedule calls for dozens of top-flight games.

Selecting the outstanding headline attraction of the day presents no difficulty with the unbeaten and united Georgia and Tulane teams clashing down athens way. This affair is likely to prove one of the big moments of the 1931 season.

The South also provides the No. two game of the day with Tennessee, another team boasting a perfect record, meeting a crack Vanderbilt aggregation, defeated only by Tulane and Georgia.

Interest in the east is divided among half-a-dozen interesting games—Army vs. Pittsburgh; Holy Cross vs. Carnegie Tech; Fordman vs. N. Y. U.; Syracuse vs. Colgate and Cornell vs. Dartmouth. Six of the teams involved in this batch of games, Harvard, Notre Dame, Temple, Fordham, Syracuse, and Cornell are undefeated.

Notre Dame, making its first appearance of the year on the Atlantic seaboard and Harvard, probably the strongest club in this sector, are expected to experience only a modicum of trouble in maintaining their records.

Yale, restnig for Harard on the 21st, will not play. Princeton will take on Washington and Lee.

Georgia Tech at Pennsylvania; Notre Dame at Annapolis and Villanova at Detroit are the chief intersectionals.

The mid-western schtdule is slightly below par. Northwestern, marching to a Big Ten championship, engages Indiana; Illinois plays Chicago; Ohio Stae meets Wisconsin and Iowa plays Purdue in the Big Ten games. Michigan plays its bitter rival, Michigan State, and Minnesota has a soft-touch in Cornell college.

Kansas Aggies vs. Nebraska; Iowa State vs. Drake; and Oklahoma vs. Missouri provide the features in the Missouri valley sector.

The far coast's "Big Three"—Southern California, Stanford and California—meet minor foes in Montana; Neveda and Idaho respectively, but the Washington-Washington State and Oregon-Oregon State contests promise big-time competition.

Southern Methodists clash with Baylor looks best in the southwest with Texas vs. Texas Christian and Rice vs. Texas Aggies as worthwhile runners-up.

Gopher Stars May Not See Action Today

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—With eight lettermen making their final appearance of the regular home season, Minnesota's football warriors today play Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Iowa.

The seniors who will not be seen again by home crowd unless the Gophers play a charity game here on Nov. 28 are Captain Clarence Munn, Pete Somers, Quentin Burdick, Allen Teeter, Lloyd Stein, Robert Reihson, Al Krezowski and Harold Anderson.

Burdick, Kenneth MacDougall and Jack Manders may not see action in the game at all. Burdick has a sprained knee while MacDougall hurt his right knee in scrimmage this week and probably won't be used today so that Crisler will have him intact for the Michigan game. Manders has a bad right shoulder which is not serious but painful due to an exposed nerve.

Give 'Em Noise

New York—Americans must have noise with their meals, a local cafeteria proprietor opines. After enjoying considerable patronage, the owner decided to increase his business by eliminating much of the din about his place in installing a soundproof ceiling and walls. But instead of increasing, his business fell off. He ripped out the insulation and the former volume of business was restored.

RING MASTER TAKES BOUNDING BASQUE IN FREE SWINGING BOUT

LOUGHRAN SLIPS INJURING LEG BUT RECOVERS TO WHIP PAULINO EASILY

New York, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Perhaps Tommy Luoghran is a "cream puff" puncher, as the critics declare, but it would be hard to convince Paulino Uzcudun of that fact today.

Injured In Fall

"He didn't hurt me. No one hurts me," said Paulino as his cuts were being dressed after the fight. "But don't let anyone tell you he doesn't hit. His blows carry some sting even when he is doing fancy boxing and when he sets himself he can hit as hard as anyone."

Tommy was coasting along piling up a big lead on points when he slipped, in avoiding a Paulino rush during the sixth round and sprained his ankle. He was limping noticeably when he arose. Only his knowledge of ring lore enabled Loughran to last out the round.

Emergency repairs, including bandaging wiht adhesive tape, alleviated the pain and Tommy took command of the fighting again in the seventh. From the time of the injury, Loughran never was able to use his dancing master tactics. Instead he was forced to rely on punching—and against a foe rated as the most rugged fighter in the ring.

Loughran Takes 6 Rounds

Tommy punched better than in any previous New York appearance, raking the sturdy basque with sharp left hooks and jolting rights. Meanwhile his own boxing skill enabled him to avoid the majority of Paulino's returns and to take the fight by a wide margin.

Loughran won six rounds, hled Paulino even in the first, sixth, and ninth and lost only the 10th, and received the ballots of Referee Jed Gahan and Judge Marty Monroe. Judge Tommy Shortell voted for Paulino but was rightly overruled.

Davis Cup Netster Weds Film Actress

Hamstead, Eng., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, famous Davis Cup tennis player, and Miss Phyllis Konstam, film actress, were married today at the Parish church.

John Oliff, Austin's double partner, was best man. A large group of tennis players and actors attended the wedding.

The couple met on an Atlantic liner enroute to New York in 1930. They will go to Scandinavia on a honeymoon and Austin will play in international matches while there.

Gopher Stars May Not See Action Today

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 14—(U.P.)—With eight lettermen making their final appearance of the regular home season, Minnesota's football warriors today play Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Iowa.

The seniors who will not be seen again by home crowd unless the Gophers play a charity game here on Nov. 28 are Captain Clarence Munn, Pete Somers, Quentin Burdick, Allen Teeter, Lloyd Stein, Robert Reihson, Al Krezowski and Harold Anderson.

Burdick, Kenneth MacDougall and Jack Manders may not see action in the game at all. Burdick has a sprained knee while MacDougall hurt his right knee in scrimmage this week and probably won't be used today so that Crisler will have him intact for the Michigan game. Manders has a bad right shoulder which is not serious but painful due to an exposed nerve.

Give 'Em Noise

New York—Americans must have noise with their meals, a local cafeteria proprietor opines. After enjoying considerable patronage, the owner decided to increase his business by eliminating much of the din about his place in installing a soundproof ceiling and walls. But instead of increasing, his business fell off. He ripped out the insulation and the former volume of business was restored.

RING MASTER TAKES BOUNDING BASQUE IN FREE SWINGING BOUT

LOUGHRAN SLIPS INJURING LEG BUT RECOVERS TO WHIP PAULINO EASILY

New York, Nov. 14—(U.P.)—Perhaps Tommy Luoghran is a "cream puff" puncher, as the critics declare, but it would be hard to convince Paulino Uzcudun of that fact today.

Injured In Fall

"He didn't hurt me. No one hurts me," said Paulino as his cuts were being dressed after the fight. "But don't let anyone tell you he doesn't hit. His blows carry some sting even when he is doing fancy boxing and when he sets himself he can hit as hard as anyone."

Tommy was coasting along piling up a big lead on points when he slipped, in avoiding a Paulino rush during the sixth round and sprained his ankle. He was limping noticeably when he arose. Only his knowledge of ring lore enabled Loughran to last out the round.

Emergency repairs, including bandaging wiht adhesive tape, alleviated the pain and Tommy took command of the fighting again in the seventh. From the time of the injury, Loughran never was able to use his dancing master tactics. Instead he was forced to rely on punching—and against a foe rated as the most rugged fighter in the ring.

Loughran Takes 6 Rounds

Tommy punched better than in any previous New York appearance, raking the sturdy basque with sharp left hooks and jolting rights. Meanwhile his own boxing skill enabled him to avoid the majority of Paulino's returns and to take the fight by a wide margin.

Loughran won six rounds, hled Paulino even in the first, sixth, and ninth and lost only the 10th, and received the ballots of Referee Jed Gahan and Judge Marty Monroe. Judge Tommy Shortell voted for Paulino but was rightly overruled.

Lake Edward 4-H Club Awarded County Meritorious Trophy

GILBERT LAKE AND DAGGETT BROOK TIE WITH 99 FOR SECOND

AWARD MADE BY DEERWOOD COMMERCIAL CLUB AT RALLY DAY PROGRAM HERE

Leading only by half a point in merit over two other clubs, the Lake Edward 4-H club was announced this afternoon as the winner of the trophy donated by the Deerwood Commercial club to the club doing most distinguished work of the past season.

The trophy was awarded at the rally day program in the farmers' room of the court house attended by more than 300 boys and girls of 4-H clubs in the county. The presentation was made by John Oberg, president of the Deerwood Commercial club.

Virginia Cook Wins in Leadership

Virginia Cook, Nokay Lake, won the junior leadership awarded, ranking highest in the opinion of a committee headed by Miss Gertrude Anderson, Little Falls, former county club leader.

In the county club award the Gilbert Lake and Daggett Brook clubs tied for second place and ran close to winning the coveted trophy.

The selection was made by a committee from the Deerwood Commercial club who were furnished wtih records of the individual 4-H clubs in the county.

Teh trophy was first awarded and won in 1929 by the St. Mathias club. The Allen club carried off the honors last year. The cup must be won three years consecutively before it becomes the permanent possession of a club.

Lake Edwards Record

Judges carefully checked the work of each club and awarded the trophy to Lake Edwards because of the following merits:

During the season the club won $130 in prizes in fairs in the county, two members were awarded trips to the state afir, the club sponsored a kittenball team, had perfect attendance at the six best meetings, all 14 members of the club completed projects, had required number of visitors at the meeetings, sponsord picnics, ice cream socials, etc., all members attended the vairous afirs and exhibitions in the county and Achievement Day in Brainerd, rated as sponsors of the six best programs, had full representation on demonstration teams and had the best narrative reports.

Officers of Winning Clubs

Officers of the club are: President, Earl Bedore; vice president, Edward Smith, secretary, Josephine Brenna; adult local leader, Mrs. H. M. Haff; publicity chairman, Vivian Larson; junior leaders, Beatrice Shull, Earl Bedore.

Lake Edward scored 99½ points out of a possible 100. Other high marks obtained by clubs follow: Gilbert Lake, 99; Daggett Brook, 99; Miller Lake, 97½; Beaver Dam, 96½; Pine Tree Stickers, 95½; Ross Lake, 94½; Little Pine, 93½; St. Mathias, 91½; Oak Lawn, 91½; Dean Lake, 91; Perry Lake, 90½; Shirt Lake, 89½; Swanburg, 89½; Nokay Lake, 88½; Klondyke Klickers, 86½; Deerwood, 84½; Mission, 84½; Crosby - Ironton, 82; Nisswa, 80½.

In selecting Virginia Cook as winner of the junior leadership award, judges considered her leadership report which indicated she had devoted much time to it thorughout the season, also her scrapbook which was adjudged the best entered. Miss Cook also had won a trip to the Junior Livestock Show at South St. Paul.

Leaders Win Recommends

High recommends were given the following junior leaders: Violet Simonson, Pine Tree Stickers, Deerwood; Arne Kivioja, Crosby-Ironton; Gail Prushek, Perry Lake; Elsie May Currier, Shirt Lake; Helen Wenzel, Dean Lake; Beatrice Shull, Lake Edward; Hortense McKay, Oak Lawn.

The climax of rally day came with the serving of a luncheon at 5:30 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. A. F. Claus, St. Mathias. Contributions by Brainerd business men made possible the luncheon.

The speaker of the afternoon was State Club Leader T. A. Erickson. Mrs. John Gibson, Gilbert Lake, explained the qualities of the County 4-H club booth that carried off first prize at the Minnesota State Fair.

County Agent E. G. Roth conducted the meeting.

SHOPPING EXPERT IS COMING SOON

"BETTY LOU" WILL ADVISE BRAINERD READERS ON SHOPPING PROBLEMS

"Betty Lou," widely known shopping expert, is coming to Brainerd soon. Arrangements were completed several weeks ago for her personal appearance here, and she will conduct a shopping feature through the pages of the Daily Dispatch, under the caption "Betty Lou Goes Shopping."

Betty Lou in person will visit the stores of Brainerd. She will make these calls as a shopper, not as a sales person and will advise the readers of the Daily Dispatch concerning the interesting things she has found. Betty Lou has shopped in cities all over the United States, she knows shopping problems from the buyer's side of the counter, and she has the happy faculty of writing about her experiences in a most interesting manner.

It is Betty Lou's contention that seasonable merchandise, such as is being shown here in Brainerd, has just as much "news value" as any other items that appear in the newspaper. "I find that readers in all sections of the country are deeply interested in my shopping columns", says Betty Lou, "and most readers are surprised to know that they can find in their home stores just as good merchandise and as good service as they can obtain in distant cities."

Her purpose in Brainerd will be to find the outstanding merchandise and service features of our city, and report them to the public from her own experienced viewpoint. The "Betty Lou Goes Shopping" department will first appear in the Daily Dispatch in an early issue.

CRIMINAL CASES ON NEXT WEEK'S DOCKET IN DISTRICT COURT

ONE PLEADS GUILTY TO THE BREAKIN OF A COTTAGE ON BAY LAKE

With all civil cases but one shunted to make room for the criminal cases, criminal proceedings will be started in district court Monday, Clerk of Court W. A. M. Johnstone reported today.

Latest peladings in criminal cases were entered on the books today. Roger Stinson entered a plea of guilty to breaking into a summer cottage owned by Alfred Forsgren on Bay Lake, May 15, 1931. He will be sentenced next week.

Otto Metzer pleaded not guilty to the charge of carnal knowledge and Robert Turner pleaded not guilty to 12 indictments which include charges of burglary.

PUSH ROLL CALL TO COMPLETE MAJORITY OF DRIVE NEXT WEEK

An effort is being made to complete the greater part of the Red Cross Roll Call in Brainerd by the close of next week, it was revealed today in a statement by I. L. Peterson, chairman in charge of workers.

The final windup of the roll call will take place Thanksgiving Day.

Three additional assignments of workers were made today. Mrs. Sidney Parker will solicit members on Seventh street N. and on Kingwood street between 5th and 7th streets. Mrs. Frank B. Johnson will be in charge of the 5th street N. drive while Rev. W. R. Thomas will be in charge of the Northeast campaign.

The Lincoln school today had turned over $23 collected by subscription in the school.

BAPTISTS TO OBSERVE DAY

"Men and Missions" Sunday will be observed in the services at the First Baptist church tomorrow, with the Rev. Edgar A. Valiant speaking at the morning service on "The Man and His Mission." At the evening service Rev. Valiant will speak on "The Son of Man."

Will Anderson will be the soloist at the evening hour of worship, and special anthems wil be sung by the church choir during the morning and evening services.

KEMERER TO BLESS THABES' MEMORIAL WINDOW AT CHURCH

A service of beauty and impsessiveness will be held in St. Paul's Episcopal church tomorrow morning for the unveiling of an art glass window given by the parents and grandparents of Maribel Thabes as a thank offering memorial for the child's recovery from accidental drug poisoning here last summer. The window is the joint gift of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Sr.

The service will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. B. T. Kemerer, Bishop Co-Adjutor of the Diocese of Duluth who will bless the memorial window.

The window has as its motive "Christ Blessing Little Children" and is fabricated so as to bring out most vividly a child's relation to the "Kingdom of Heaven." Many have pronounced this piece of art as one of the best they have seen.

Services will start at 11 a. m. The public is extended an invitation to attend in a statement by Rev. C. M. Brandon, pastor of the church, today.

Lake Edward 4-H Club Awarded County Meritorious Trophy

GILBERT LAKE AND DAGGETT BROOK TIE WITH 99 FOR SECOND

AWARD MADE BY DEERWOOD COMMERCIAL CLUB AT RALLY DAY PROGRAM HERE

Leading only by half a point in merit over two other clubs, the Lake Edward 4-H club was announced this afternoon as the winner of the trophy donated by the Deerwood Commercial club to the club doing most distinguished work of the past season.

The trophy was awarded at the rally day program in the farmers' room of the court house attended by more than 300 boys and girls of 4-H clubs in the county. The presentation was made by John Oberg, president of the Deerwood Commercial club.

Lake Edwards Record

Judges carefully checked the work of each club and awarded the trophy to Lake Edwards because of the following merits:

During the season the club won $130 in prizes in fairs in the county, two members were awarded trips to the state afir, the club sponsored a kittenball team, had perfect attendance at the six best meetings, all 14 members of the club completed projects, had required number of visitors at the meeetings, sponsord picnics, ice cream socials, etc., all members attended the vairous afirs and exhibitions in the county and Achievement Day in Brainerd, rated as sponsors of the six best programs, had full representation on demonstration teams and had the best narrative reports.

Officers of Winning Clubs

Officers of the club are: President, Earl Bedore; vice president, Edward Smith, secretary, Josephine Brenna; adult local leader, Mrs. H. M. Haff; publicity chairman, Vivian Larson; junior leaders, Beatrice Shull, Earl Bedore.

Lake Edward scored 99½ points out of a possible 100. Other high marks obtained by clubs follow: Gilbert Lake, 99; Daggett Brook, 99; Miller Lake, 97½; Beaver Dam, 96½; Pine Tree Stickers, 95½; Ross Lake, 94½; Little Pine, 93½; St. Mathias, 91½; Oak Lawn, 91½; Dean Lake, 91; Perry Lake, 90½; Shirt Lake, 89½; Swanburg, 89½; Nokay Lake, 88½; Klondyke Klickers, 86½; Deerwood, 84½; Mission, 84½; Crosby - Ironton, 82; Nisswa, 80½.

In selecting Virginia Cook as winner of the junior leadership award, judges considered her leadership report which indicated she had devoted much time to it thorughout the season, also her scrapbook which was adjudged the best entered. Miss Cook also had won a trip to the Junior Livestock Show at South St. Paul.

Leaders Win Recommends

High recommends were given the following junior leaders: Violet Simonson, Pine Tree Stickers, Deerwood; Arne Kivioja, Crosby-Ironton; Gail Prushek, Perry Lake; Elsie May Currier, Shirt Lake; Helen Wenzel, Dean Lake; Beatrice Shull, Lake Edward; Hortense McKay, Oak Lawn.

The climax of rally day came with the serving of a luncheon at 3:30 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. A. F. Claus, St. Mathias. Contributions by Brainerd business men made possible the luncheon.

The speaker of the afternoon was State Club Leader T. A. Erickson. Mrs. John Gibson, Gilbert Lake, explained the qualities of the County 4-H club booth that carried off first prize at the Minnesota State Fair.

County Agent E. G. Roth conducted the meeting.

SHOPPING EXPERT IS COMING SOON

"BETTY LOU" WILL ADVISE BRAINERD READERS ON SHOPPING PROBLEMS

"Betty Lou," widely known shopping expert, is coming to Brainerd soon. Arrangements were completed several weeks ago for her personal appearance here, and she will conduct a shopping feature through the pages of the Daily Dispatch, under the caption "Betty Lou Goes Shopping."

Betty Lou in person will visit the stores of Brainerd. She will make these calls as a shopper, not as a sales person and will advise the readers of the Daily Dispatch concerning the interesting things she has found. Betty Lou has shopped in cities all over the United States, she knows shopping problems from the buyer's side of the counter, and she has the happy faculty of writing about her experiences in a most interesting manner.

It is Betty Lou's contention that seasonable merchandise, such as is being shown here in Brainerd, has just as much "news value" as any other items that appear in the newspaper. "I find that readers in all sections of the country are deeply interested in my shopping columns", says Betty Lou, "and most readers are surprised to know that they can find in their home stores just as good merchandise and as good service as they can obtain in distant cities."

Her purpose in Brainerd will be to find the outstanding merchandise and service features of our city, and report them to the public from her own experienced viewpoint. The "Betty Lou Goes Shopping" department will first appear in the Daily Dispatch in an early issue.

CRIMINAL CASES ON NEXT WEEK'S DOCKET IN DISTRICT COURT

ONE PLEADS GUILTY TO THE BREAKIN OF A COTTAGE ON BAY LAKE

With all civil cases but one shunted to make room for the criminal cases, criminal proceedings will be started in district court Monday, Clerk of Court W. A. M. Johnstone reported today.

Latest peladings in criminal cases were entered on the books today. Roger Stinson entered a plea of guilty to breaking into a summer cottage owned by Alfred Forsgren on Bay Lake, May 15, 1931. He will be sentenced next week.

Otto Metzer pleaded not guilty to the charge of carnal knowledge and Robert Turner pleaded not guilty to 12 indictments which include charges of burglary.

PUSH ROLL CALL TO COMPLETE MAJORITY OF DRIVE NEXT WEEK

An effort is being made to complete the greater part of the Red Cross Roll Call in Brainerd by the close of next week, it was revealed today in a statement by I. L. Peterson, chairman in charge of workers.

The final windup of the roll call will take place Thanksgiving Day.

Three additional assignments of workers were made today. Mrs. Sidney Parker will solicit members on Seventh street N. and on Kingwood street between 5th and 7th streets. Mrs. Frank B. Johnson will be in charge of the 5th street N. drive while Rev. W. R. Thomas will be in charge of the Northeast campaign.

The Lincoln school today had turned over $23 collected by subscription in the school.

BAPTISTS TO OBSERVE DAY

"Men and Missions" Sunday will be observed in the services at the First Baptist church tomorrow, with the Rev. Edgar A. Valiant speaking at the morning service on "The Man and His Mission." At the evening service Rev. Valiant will speak on "The Son of Man."

Will Anderson will be the soloist at the evening hour of worship, and special anthems wil be sung by the church choir during the morning and evening services.

KEMERER TO BLESS THABES' MEMORIAL WINDOW AT CHURCH

A service of beauty and impsessiveness will be held in St. Paul's Episcopal church tomorrow morning for the unveiling of an art glass window given by the parents and grandparents of Maribel Thabes as a thank offering memorial for the child's recovery from accidental drug poisoning here last summer. The window is the joint gift of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Thabes, Sr.

The service will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. B. T. Kemerer, Bishop Co-Adjutor of the Diocese of Duluth who will bless the memorial window.

The window has as its motive "Christ Blessing Little Children" and is fabricated so as to bring out most vividly a child's relation to the "Kingdom of Heaven." Many have pronounced this piece of art as one of the best they have seen.

Services will start at 11 a. m. The public is extended an invitation to attend in a statement by Rev. C. M. Brandon, pastor of the church, today.
